SHABUOTH AND CONFIRMATION

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

Whatever may be the origin of the Shabuoth festival, very likely a joyous herald of spring, it has gained rich vitality for the Jew in whose synagogue it is signalized by the confirmation ceremonies. According to tradition Shabuoth commemorates the anniversary of the giving of the law on Mount Sinai. In the orthodox synagogue, there is little to give this festival a hold on the imagination of worshipers. The ritual is like any other ritual. Pesach with the Matzoh symbolism, Succoth with the Lulav and Booth have a distinctiveness which Shabuoth lacks. In the reform synagogues and now also in some conservative synagogues (more wholesome imitation) where the confirmation ceremonies have been made part of the Shabuoth festival, it has gained fresh meaning. Without confirmation Shabuoth, lacking all picturesqueness, would have indeed become pale and anaemic. Liberal Judaism has thus saved a dying festival. In fact in synagogues where confirmation has been a long-established custom, it is more difficult to gain admission on Shabuoth than it is during Yom Kippur, so numerous are the worshipers. How beautiful and appropriate it is for children to renew their pledge to Torah, on the birthday of Torah.

Now what constitutes confirmation? The confirmation is meant to be the climax of years of study in the religious school of Judaism and Jewish history, the last two years being under the tutelage of the rabbi. The rabbi endeavours to teach the fundamentals of all religion, and then the fundamentals of Judaism. The problems of prayer, retribution, immortality, intermarriage, etc., are thoroughly presented and discussed. An attempt is made to give children an attitude of understanding towards Judaism. Dogmas are not pounded into them, but Jewish beliefs and views are discussed with them. The attempt is made to prepare the child for the doubts about religion which are inevitable to all who think. The child is introduced in the synagogue by the rabbi to the problem of the conflict between science and religion, between evolution and creation. The modern attitude towards the bible is part of the course, and Jewish youth who have been introduced to modern thought in the synagogue by their teacher, will not so easily scoff at their faith, when their biology or geology instructor at the university proves that the biblical account of creation is scientifically untenable. The children are also taught to distinguish between ritual and religion—that the former may but need not convey religious spirit. In other words, children are prepared for the practice of Judaism. They are also taught Jewish history up to the modern day.

It is true, as was pointed out by M. Frank in last week's issue of the Canadian Jewish Review, that the average Jewish parent is interested in the Jewish education of the boy only till he has become bar-mitzvah, and the matter of the girls' religious education is too frequently summed up in kitchen regulations. The time has come when Jewish parents must realize that if the next generation, which inevitably will be less observant, is to remain Jewish, it must know Judaism and Jewish history. We, therefore, concur heartily in the proposal for the establishment of Jewish high schools. Holy Blossom

SHEVUOTH

The Jewish calendar shows that this week we will be called upon to observe and celebrate the "festival of the weeks"—Shevuoth.

A handful of Jews will betake themselves to the synagogues or temples; recite some of the liturgy; listen to a sermon; thrill to the tuneful chants of the cantor. And the good mothers will do what good mothers in Israel are expected to do—prepare the toothsome delicacies appropriate for the occasion.

And the vast majority of the Jews will scarcely know that a day of godliness has punctuated the array of profane routine days of their life; a day that is different from the others; a day charged with the supreme joyousness of man's love for nature; the beauty of historic associations; the sweetness of a folk-tradition.

These festivals, each with its own especial flavour, are disappearing from the surface of our Jewish life. They are being crowded off the scene. The maddening rush of our daily activities will leave no room for these little islands of repose and reflectiveness and God-contacting. Haste, speed, ceaseless grinding.

The sabbath idea represents the summum bonum, the highest moment in the conception of human values. First there is a period of work; activity; hustle; struggle; achievement; defeat. Then comes the period of relaxation; summing up; contemplating the meaning of things; contacting the unity of all the manifold experiences; recognizing the place of man in the scheme of the world.

The sabbath idea is the foundation of Jewish thought. It is, as Moses Hess put it, the essence of Jerusalem's contribution to civilization. Life is not an agglomeration of accidents. The world is not a playground of blind forces. The significance of human activity does not consist in the thrill of sensations and the reckless chase after transitory gratifications. The world is ruled by certain principles of logic. The diversities of life are pervaded by an indefeasible unity. Behind the mass of appearances there is an immutable reality. The sabbath idea was the symbol of the projection of the unity of life as against the confusion of the details. It reflected the capacity of man to lift himself above the plane of petty immediate concerns to the level of thinkers and seers.

The Jewish festivals partook of the character of the sabbath in their emphasis of fundamentals in life. Jewish existence has been trying and precarious. Came the festivals and struck new notes of joyousness, breathing messages of gladness and encouragement. Each festival stressed an idea; was a reminder that life had a deeper meaning which could sustain in adversity. The observance of the festivals meant the slashing of a wide gash in the sordidness of routine; the participation in a pretty game in which the finer qualities of man were given exercise.

Our Jewish life is losing its capacity for sabbatical sublimation. It is petty and prosaic. It shares the grosser faults of the life of the environment. Sabbatism implies idealism, meditativeness, profundity. We are bitten with the germ of activism; strenuous pursuit of profit and power and pleasure. We cannot lapse into the restful moods of meditativeness and contemplate on the deeper aspects of life and God. And we are losing our capacity for observing and

McGILL ANNOUNCES VOLUME BY SAUL HAYES

Announcement was made by Dr. Stephen Leacock, chairman of the Department of Economics and Political Science at McGill University, that arrangements have been completed with a publishing firm to publish an outstanding work by one of the graduate students in the department, Saul Hayes, who has been doing research work at McGill.

The volume is to appear in the fall, and will be an economic history of the Dominion. Mr. Hayes, who is submitting a work on the same subject to the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research at McGill for his master's degree, won several scholarships in his undergraduate days for work in the economics department. He graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts last spring, winning the Allan Oliver gold medal and fellowship in economics and took up work in the graduate school.

In commenting on the work, Dr. Leacock stated that it was a fine study, well arranged, and particularly valuable in the light of Mr. Hayes' maturity of analysis. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Hayes, 7 Winchester Avenue.

THE YOUNG HEBREW MALBISH ARUMIM SOCIETY

There are organizations in our city doing splendid work in the field of Jewish social service without any noise or beating of drums. These work quietly and with a fine spirit of dignity. To such type of organizations belongs the Young Hebrew Malbish Arumim Society. This Society clothes the poor children twice yearly—in the spring and winter. To "clothe the naked" is one of the sublime precepts of our faith. From time immemorial the Jew was taught this mitzvah. And indeed it is one of the finest of practices in the Jewish faith. We are happy that in Montreal such an organization as Malbish Arumim thrives. And it is a unique society in that its members are the young men and women from the north and east sections of the city who are so close to the Jewish neighbourhoods where so many poor Jewish children are in need of garments and raiment.

WHAT IS KOSHER?

Peculiar "sha-aloth" are placed before the writer of this column. The above question we are asked frequently and we shall attempt to answer it frankly. According to the Biblical legislation the people of Israel were forbidden to eat the flesh of beasts found torn (trefa) or that had died a natural death (nebelah), as well as all kinds of animals declared unclean; the stated reason being that Israel should be "a holy people unto the Lord." Israel is to be distinguished from other nations by the avoidance of unclean and abominable things that defile them. Ancient and writers of recent day have attempted to "rationalize" concerning the dietary laws. Thus Mimonides is of the opinion that the laws of Kashruth were instituted for hygienic purposes. Others attempt to argue in its behalf because of psychological reasons, presupposing that the animals prohibited are loathsome. Still other authorities are of the opinion that the dietary laws were brought about in order that Israel should be kept from assimilating with other nations. But from the historical and scientific view, the dietary laws have their origin in the system of taboo. The early peoples held certain animals to be tabooed or forbidden. These unclean animals were to be avoided by all those persons who laid special claim to holiness; the saints of all ancient nations did not partake of the animals forbidden. The animals forbidden in the Mosaic code are almost the same as are prohibited to the priests in the ancient Hindu, Babylonian and Egyptian laws. The prohibition of eating together meat and milk is supposed to be derived from the Biblical injunction: "Thou shalt not seethe the kid feeding upon its mother's milk." But the practice of "milchege and fleishige" seems to rest on a temple practice which avoided the mixing of dishes required a different treatment from the Levitical point of view. Cheese and fowl were eaten together, judging from discussions in the Talmud (Hulen III, Eduy V-2). In the present-day world, especially in western countries, the dietary laws are observed in the breach. There is great difficulty in following the letter of these laws. Hence we find Jews who claim to be very observant and orthodox eating in hotels where there are no Kosher kitchens. These Jews do not eat the "meats" but substitute "fish dinners"—imagining that the substitution is a Kosher one. From the view of the Jewish dietary laws, it is not kosher to eat even fish dinners in non-Kosher hotels. And it would be a fine thing for Jews not to delude themselves and think that they still are observing the dietary laws when they eat fish dinners in un-Kosher restaurants. All this we write under the heading "Kosher" and more is to be said on the subject which space in this column cannot be provided for at the present.

MENTAL LAZINESS

Few of us do like to think! Statistics indicate that only five out of every hundred do make an attempt to fashion thought. It's too bad! Mental laziness makes peculiar creatures out of us. Our minds are closed. The windows of our soul are thus never opened. We continue with our prejudices from year to year. Mentally we do not grow. There are many practices in Judaism which are of a fetich and non-Jewish character. We have "holinised" them and hallowed them. But they are meaningless under the light of a reasonable faith. Then, too, [illegible] about the goy which ought to be [illegible] mind. As Jews our

WAS SIGNALLY HONOURED BY THE PHOTOGRAPHERS' ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, WHICH CERTIFIED TO THE STRIKING SUCCESS OF THEIR PHOTOGRAPHS SUBMITTED AT THE EXHIBITION IN CLEVELAND, OHIO. RICE STUDIO WAS AWARDED THE "SEAL OF MERIT" BY THE CONVENTION AND A NUMBER OF PRINTS WERE SELECTED FOR THE TRAVELLING LOAN EXHIBITS. THESE HONOURS ARE PARTICULARLY INTERESTING IN VIEW OF THE FACT THAT PICTURES WERE JUDGED MORE STRICTLY THIS YEAR. THEY WERE DIVIDED INTO THREE CLASSES, A, B, AND C. PHOTOGRAPHS EXHIBITED BY RICE WERE PLACED IN CLASS A, AMONG THE FINEST SPECIMENS. THE TRAVELLING LOAN EXHIBIT, WHICH WAS SHOWN IN THIRTY-NINE CITIES LAST YEAR, HAS ALREADY BEEN BOOKED BY SIXTY CITIES THIS YEAR AND INDICATIONS ARE THAT BEFORE THE YEAR IS OVER THEY WILL HAVE BEEN SHOWN IN 100 CITIES OR MORE. ON ACCOUNT OF THE HIGHER REQUIREMENTS THIS YEAR FEWER PRINTS WERE CHOSEN FOR THIS EDUCATIONAL WORK. L. C. VINSON, GENERAL SECRETARY OF THE PHOTOGRAPHERS' ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, HAS ASKED THE RICE STUDIO FOR A COMPLETE SET OF PRINTS FOR THIS EXHIBITION.

IMPERIAL tank ships go all the way to South America for the crude petroleum from which Marvelube is made. Many crude oils are available right at Canada's front door, but none of these possesses the lubricating properties of Peruvian crude. Peruvian crude is so distinctly superior a base for lubricating oil that its exclusive qualities warrant the 8,000 mile trips of IMPERIAL'S huge tank ships.

The resources of Canada's largest refiners of petroleum products make Marvelube possible. In addition to using a better crude for the manufacture of Marvelube, IMPERIAL OIL LIMITED employs improved and exclusive methods of refining.

From oil well to crankcase IMPERIAL resources and IMPERIAL equipment combine to produce in Marvelube a distinctly better oil.

LONDON

Isidore Goldstick, head of the department of modern languages in the Sir Adam Beck Collegiate, received notice from the School of Graduate Studies, Toronto University, that he had attained the degree of doctor of pedagogy, following the acceptance of his thesis on "Modern Languages in Ontario Secondary Schools." Dr. Goldstick, who is a specialist in moderns and history, was asked by the Canadian committee, co-operating with a similar committee in the United States on the question of modern language teaching in American secondary schools, to prepare an historical account of this work from the beginning in Ontario secondary schools. The report of the Canadian committee has just been published in two volumes of 600 pages each. Dr. Goldstick's report covers 250 pages in the second volume and represents exhaustive research work of the past three years. London's newest doctor of pedagogy graduated from Toronto University in 1914 with the degree of master of arts and academic qualifications for the degree of bachelor of pedagogy. He taught at Upper Canada College, Toronto, for two years and then came to the London Central Collegiate in 1917. Dr. Goldstick taught there for six years and when the east collegiate was opened as a separate unit in the old Princess Avenue public school, before being moved as the Sir Adam Beck Collegiate into its handsome new building on Dundas Street east a year ago, he was named head of the department of modern languages in that unit. Dr. Goldstick's report will be published separately as his doctor of pedagogy thesis. A prominent member of the Bnai Brith, Dr. Goldstick has contributed much in many ways to the intellectual life of the city, being regarded as a master of the English language.

The Security Frauds Prevention Act, 1928

will come into force
15th MAY, 1928

All must be registered by
15th JUNE, 1928

Every person who wishes to deal in securities will apply for registration unless he comes within the exemptions.

The Regulations as to applications and fees are as follows:

14. Every request for registration shall be made by letter to the Registrar, enclosing a certified cheque, money order or postal note, made payable to the Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, for the fee, which shall be $5.00, in the case of a salesman whose employer is or is to be registered, and $25.00 in all other cases, and shall state whether registration is sought for brokerage trading as an individual, partnership, company or official thereof, or for non-brokerage trading as a company, unincorporated organization or official thereof, or for trading as a salesman, and the salesman shall also state the name and address of his employer and whether the employer has applied or will apply for registration.

16. Applicants for registration, whose officials or employees must also be registered as brokers or salesmen, may in the letter mentioned in Regulation 14 make application on behalf of such officials or employees, naming them, and may enclose a single cheque to cover all fees setting forth in the letter the amount paid by each, but the forms shall be completed by each official or employee.

TRADING includes generally any attempt to dispose of a security in any way whatever, including advertising.

SECURITIES includes every document which represents any interest in any property of any organization, whether incorporated or not.

BROKERAGE TRADING covers dealings with securities generally.

NON-BROKERAGE TRADING covers dealings by a company or organization in securities of its own issue only.

EXEMPTIONS

JUDICIAL sales and sales by executors, administrators, guardians, committees, authorized trustees, receivers, liquidators and the like, are exempt. An owner selling his own security need not register unless such sale is one of a series of continued and sucessive acts. No person need register if he trades only with banks, loan, trust or insurance companies, government or municipal officials or employees, or registered brokers. A pledgee's sale of a security for a debt is exempt. So are stock dividends, exchanges on mergers and trustee's securities. The Act does not apply to a prospector's "grub stake" nor to a sale by him of his share in his own claim. Bond issues sold en bloc are not affected, nor negotiable paper maturing within the year, nor lien notes, nor shares of non-profit sharing organizations. The exact wording of these exemptions in the Act is important.

Applicants will receive a copy of the Act and Regulations with the Forms.

GENERALLY ALL WHO WISH TO CONTINUE TRADING IN SECURITIES SHOULD APPLY FOR REGISTRATION

Rabbi Isserman's Editorial

Synagogue has had such a high school for many years, where Jewish youth up to the ages of seventeen and eighteen have studied Judaism and kindred subjects. But one or two such schools in a city of forty-five thousand Jews is inadequate. Every section of the city should have one.

Meanwhile, the reform synagogues again have led the way, when they realized that the exigencies of modern times render thorough study of Hebrew difficult if not impossible for many, they have taught the necessary Jewish subjects in English. In many reform synagogues, the confirmation age has been raised to sixteen, and post-confirmation groups have functioned, and in some cities, as in Newark, Philadelphia and Detroit, Jewish normal schools and even colleges have been organized to prepare Jewish teachers and to provide higher Jewish education.

The institution of confirmation is not perfect. The confirmation standard should be raised. More hours of study should be required, but it represents a modern approach to the solution of a big Jewish problem. Judaism will live as long as Jewish children will know it. For to know it is to love and to be loyal to it.

And when Jewish children know Judaism, they will know that the primary duty of every Jew is "to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with God."

A. L. HUDSON & CO.'S NEW PREMISES REFLECT GROWTH OF CANADA'S FINANCIAL IMPORTANCE

Ontario's growth in financial importance is extraordinary. Toronto financial houses have had to step lively to handle the increased business which has demanded attention from all parts of the Province. As an indication, witness the new premises of A. L. Hudson & Co. at 11 King Street West—just a stone's throw from Yonge Street. In addition to the Toronto office there are offices at Oshawa, Sarnia, Owen Sound and Buffalo, N.Y. The new quarters cover 7,000 square feet of space, running through to Melinda Street on the south. They have been called "the finest brokerage offices in America." Certainly, they set a new standard both in size and equipment. The stock board is sixty-five feet long. Six clerks, fitted with ear-phones, are required to mark quotations on Canadian, New York, Chicago, and Winnipeg Exchanges. Two Trans-Lux systems give quotations direct from the tape. There is a ventilation system which changes the air completely every five minutes in the Board Room. The Company has thirteen lines to Central and a greater number of private lines necessitating the operation of four switchboards. A. L. Hudson & Co. are the only Canadian members of the New York Stock Exchange. They also hold memberships in five other stock, mining and produce exchanges. They operate approximately 3,000 miles of private wires to principal Canadian and United States markets.

The new premises have private offices for the partners, customers' rooms, batteries of telephones, private room for ladies, the most convenient quarters for the statistical, clerical and bookkeeping staffs.

Standing in the front of the office and looking down the 175-foot vista to the rear, one gets the impression that A. L. Hudson & Co. have made splendid provision for the comfort of their clients and staff and the prompt and accurate handling of their business. One also is impressed with the fact that they have the conviction that Ontario—and her financial centre, Toronto—is rapidly heading to a position in finance to which her natural resources and industry entitle her.

The homes of hundreds of Jewish families were destroyed in the cities of Tchirpan and Philippopolis. One Jewish child was killed in Borisovgrad, in the earthquake which rocked Bulgaria.

"Well, what do you think of that?"

"That, humpf," replied Mr. Samuelson, "why I could show you hundreds like that in England."

"Really?" retorted Davidoff. "That's an insane asylum."

When Ludwig Lewisohn wrote "The Island Within," he wrote what is a novel and a tract at the same time. The book is poignant, charming, unforgettable, despite its faults. It achieves the epic note it strives to recover. The writer is a master of beautiful prose and the best parts of the book are his introductions to its various divisions. If the book is annoying it is for one thing—that the tract in it twists and contorts the novel, often forcing characters to make speeches which they would not, when they would not except that they must say what Ludwig Lewisohn prompts them to.

"The Island Within" is meant to be a preachment against intermarriage, marriage between Jew and Gentile, that is. Lewisohn looks darkly over the top of it and warns: "Don't marry a shikse. You won't be happy if you do." You believe him, too, so subtly and so powerfully does he build up his warning, so zealous and earnest is his passion against intermarriage. But the conclusions reached by Lewisohn are not valid. Elizabeth Knight, the modern, cold, Gentile girl, and Arthur Levy, the modern Jew, are not happy together and Lewisohn fails to prove that this is because of difference in racial background. They are unhappy because they are the sort of individuals they are. Had both been Jews or both been Gentiles, the story might have been the same and their marriage would have been the same kind of failure. Lewisohn's personal objection to intermarriage, voiced after the book was published, is that he does not want to see Israel diminished. He believes that "an obscure cause of disharmony in mixed marriages is the repressed consciousness of the sin of diminishing Israel." His book would have been a stronger argument against intermarriage if the writer had stuck to this theory and theme and if he had taken a different kind of woman for Elizabeth Knight. She is a splendid, well-bred, decent person, but she is a feminist with no love of the domesticity her husband craves. She is so casual about their child that she hurts and angers him; she is not a maternal woman or a home-builder. It would have been a mistake for her to have taken up this profession in partnership with any home-loving man, Jew or Gentile. There is the reason why their marriage goes to pieces, a reason important enough to bear the entire blame.

Elizabeth says: "Well, you see, we're not suited to each other in a number of ways. And then can you see me, with the best will in the world, trying to be a Jewess? You can't, can you?"

"No. Things like that can't be learned. I suppose they have to be resurrected out of one's inner self."

"That's it. Of course you did me one injustice."

"What's that?"

"Through your ignorance of yourself. You didn't know you were going to resurrect the Jew in you."

"You're right, Elizabeth, quite right. But really I didn't even have to resurrect the Jew. I just put away a pretense—a stubborn, hard, protective pretense. But no more."

"It's a kind of argument, isn't it, against mixed marriages?"

"I'm afraid it is," he answered. "One among many others."

The book unwinds the story of Arthur Levy's discovery that he is more a Jew than he thought after trying to become the Nordic American and after trying to adjust himself to the culture about him. It tells of the discovery that within him is the island of racial emotions and affinities and bonds which he cannot escape. He is unhappy. No Jewish character in the book is a happy person and the implication is that the reason lies in the attempt of each to adjust himself or herself to the alien life surrounding. Lewisohn moves his characters about among experiences which imbue them with the feeling that it is either foolish or useless, or both, for Jews to try to become part of an alien life and setting. This alien life means nothing to them, really, and never wants them no matter how they ingratiate themselves nor how far their imitation carries them. They grow soul-sick trying to drown their race-consciousness.

Arthur Levy's grandfather was Reb Mendel, a melamed, living in Vilna, who gave up teaching Hebrew to go into the distilling business. Arthur's grandmother went to Jerusalem to die after the death of her husband. The second generation settled in Germany and one member became converted to Christianity, gaining influence but remaining miserable over his apostasy and the loss of his heritage. One member of this same generation was Arthur's father, who came to America and settled as a comfortable, German-American Jew. Arthur, his son, is the hero of the book, an American trying to believe that he is no different from any Protestant American. As a charming youth and student, as a man and psychiatrist, as a person preternaturally sensitive about Judaism, he suffers slights and comes in contact with general anti-Semitism and sees friends and relatives suffer the same things. These slights and encounters, though infinitely less monstrous than the barbarities his ancestors suffered, constitute for him those subtle pogroms which almost every Jew feels, whether he will admit it or not.

"The Island Within" should be read right now while the vogue for it is on. It is thought-provoking and full of food for discussion. It brings up many questions about the spiritually wandering Jew which you will enjoy in argument.

JEWISH STUDENTS' CONFERENCE BROKEN UP

Delegates from all university towns in France assembled in Paris to a National Students' Congress that was convened there. A long message from Professor Albert Einstein, the president of the World Federation of Jewish Students, was presented at the opening of the congress. Professor Einstein urged the Jewish students to struggle for unrestricted educational facilities. "The Jewish people," the message proceeds, "has a surplus of intellectual forces. If we take into consideration, however, our primary task, the building up of our national home and fighting against all the injustices which are committed against us, we see that our intellectual and technical forces are, in comparison with other peoples, not so great as they appear. There is a great deal of work to do. The Jew everywhere has to arouse respect and obtain recognition for his people. The work of individuals serves as a symbol for the entire people. The best method for the work before us seems to be a strong, organized federation of all Jewish students throughout the world."

A conflict between the Nationalists and the Left groups on the question of the persecution of Zionists in Russia led to the break-up of the congress. A resolution of [illegible] Russia for the persecution of Zionists was tabled through the influence of the Left and the Nationalist delegates left the hall, as a protest against this action, which caused a great deal of disturbance.

SOVIET AUTHORITIES STRUGGLING AGAINST ANTI-SEMITISM

The Soviet authorities are faced with the difficult problem of checking the spread of anti-Semitism in Russia. A book, entitled "Against Anti-Semitism" was recently published in the Government printing establishment, in which the history of the anti-Semitic movement in Russia is given and statistical data are presented as to the present condition of the Jews in the land. A delegation of sixteen young boys and girls, children of Christian Communists, was sent to investigate the condition of the Jewish colonies in Crimea. It is expected to use the report of this youthful delegation in the fight against anti-Semitism.

A riot between Jewish and Christian women workers in a factory in Witebsk resulted in the fatal wounding of a Jewish girl. The Jewish communist press admits that the old insulting terms of Zhid and Zhidovka, which used to be heard in the Czarist regime so frequently, have been revived and it is not uncommon to hear these repeated with all the venom and hatred that they conveyed in olden times.

TURKISH STUDENTS ATTACK JEWISH BAKERIES

The chauvinistic wave that is now passing over Turkey has of late manifested itself in the demand that only Turkish be spoken in all public places. Placards and posters were placed by the one hundred per cent. Turks demanding the exclusive use of the Turkish language and foreigners were subjected to many indignities because they were unable to make themselves understood in the language of the land. At Adrianople, the students carried on the propaganda with considerable vehemence, and as the agitation coincided with the period when the Jews of the town were preparing for the Passover holiday, a group of these students attacked a number of Jewish bakeries and raided them. It was then that the Governor of the town took drastic action and ordered all placards to be torn down and all the disturbers of the peace to be arrested and punished. In this, he was supported by the Angora Government and the zeal of the youthful propagandists was greatly curbed by the prompt action of the police.

"Do we feel the spring urge?"

Summing up the matter very summarily — we rather do! We have no time for the rather poetic and romantic portion of the Spring allotment, such as frisky lambkins, blossoms, bird music and talkative booklets — ours is the more prosaic end that has to do with washing household articles ranging from curtains, rag carpets, dusters, and such, all the way to the daintiest of personal lingerie. And we feel the urge — the urge of thousands of Toronto housewives, who have come to rely on this laundry for their "family wash" problems. Day and night we feel this Spring urge — but we are well equipped with five different kinds of service to meet the greatest demand. Our prices are extremely reasonable. Phone to-day.

is an ICE-less dinner

A DINNER without ice is nowadays considered a glaring "faux pas." It's a reflection on a housewife's hospitality to put before guests, or even the family, any food that has not been kept at the height of perfection through proper refrigeration. Better to eat with one's knife or drink coffee out of one's saucer than to serve tepid water, melted butter, wilted salads!

Ice keeps food in prime condition, for it is cold and just moist enough to preserve the natural juicy flavor that gives foods their delicate tastiness. Keep a plentiful supply of ice both winter and summer. It's more than worth its cost of a few cents a day!

PANTAGES THEATRE

A new and enthralling phase of the great war is depicted in "Surrender," the Universal Jewel, which is coming to the Pantages Theatre week of May 28.

Mary Philbin and Ivan Mosjukine are the co-stars, while Edward Sloman, the noted director of "His People," directed.

This is Mosjukine's first American production, although he is known to picture fans for his splendid work in "Michael Strogoff," a Film de France production, which was released by Universal in this country.

The story is laid on the border of Russia and Austria and deals with the love of a little peasant girl for a mighty Russian prince, commander of invading troops. How she tamed his arrogance through a purifying love makes an emotional masterpiece, while for those who love action there are plenty of unusual material and colourful atmosphere when the town is invaded by the Russians and then recaptured by a counter-attack of the Austrians.

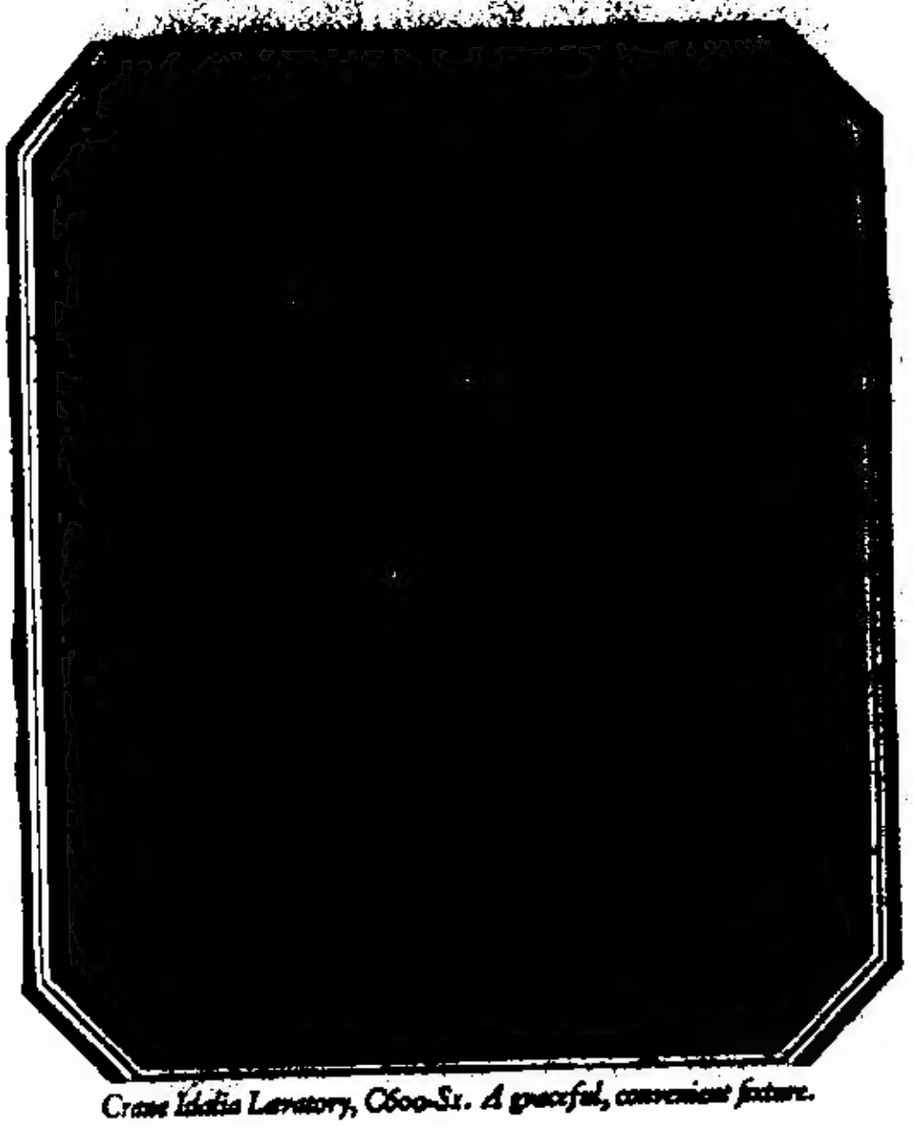
CRANE VALVES



Crane Idalia Lavatory, C600-Sr. A graceful, convenient fixture.

It's nice to get up in the morning

NICER, to be sure, to lie in bed. But much of the dread of leaving pleasant rest is gone, when petty annoyances are eliminated from the half hour that comes before the call to breakfast.

The glistening white of Crane fixtures, their graceful lines imparted by artist-designers, the charm of a well arranged bathroom, are in themselves a tonic to morning spirits.

Crane forethought, too, in such things as the Securo quick-draining waste which drains the Idalia bowl in seven seconds, and in the convenient soap dish to halt elusive gyrations of slippery soap; prevents loss of time and temper.

You can have the recognized Crane excellence for your home at a cost no higher than for other comparable materials. See the latest types of plumbing and heating fixtures, valves, and fittings at the nearest Crane Exhibit Rooms. You will not be asked to buy since Crane materials are sold only through responsible plumbing contractors.

To June Brides of this Year and brides of bygone Junes

JUST as important as the choice of the Home is the selection of the car . . . the outdoor home of the modern family.

To June brides of 1928 . . . and to the brides of Junes gone by . . . we offer this suggestion. Before you decide on your car, consider three points. . . . First, how much you want to spend. Second, how much you can get for your money. Third, how much service can you expect from and on the car you buy.

With these three points in mind we invite you to inspect our line of General Motors cars. In the "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet, you find the world's most luxurious low-priced car. In the New Canadian Oakland Six, you discover an amazingly fine six-cylinder car, large, roomy, beautiful and of superb performance. In the New Oldsmobile, you see the truly "Fine Car of Low Price" . . . a combination of smart, sophisticated beauty and smooth, thrilling performance, never before offered at anything approaching Oldsmobile's low price.

And, back of all three of these outstanding cars, you find A. D. Gorrie & Co.'s city-wide service . . . prompt, efficient and always available, in whatever part of Toronto you may be.

Before you decide on your car, see what we have to offer you.
